CONTENTS

What is Africa to me now? Transition updates Gissum Cadet’s iconic question, examining the meaning of the continent for members of African diaspora both old and new.

1 Introduction
by Benedito Leite and Darrie Turner

11 Negotiating Africa Now Mathieu Kassé offers his Chinese Acrobats: Things Fall Apart, adapted inaugurates contemporary African literature to the audience, and examines the ways that contemporary African writers are trying to escape the image of Africa as a monolith—corn in its words and stories often times in efforts to reframe what Africa “means.”

25 The Path Between Two Points Narrating the story of Be Noticed, a Muslim immigrant in France, Julie Einthoven explores how French colonial notions of travel and adventure in Africa have influenced and critical life of “adventurer” of Soumbe men trying to die out is living in the Hexagon.

44 An African Travel Narrative
John Pilli questions what it means to have a “black body,” and sets off with camera around Reminiscence/Africa in search of the debian Abyjones.

52 The Newly Black Americans Engaging in new strategies of fiction from a number of African-American writers—including Merengui, Adérbé, Opuyan, and Goli, and others—x: the Republic of preparation considers how a novel of African American thinks about race and solidarity with recent black Americans culture.

72 Happiness: Fiction
by Canaan Ubaa

82 “Some Connection with the Place” Past and present Eckhart Ray is interviewed by Pete Terrace. The author about her african-american perspective on the L.A. Riots. This piece goes on to discuss the motivations
behind her decision to return to the subject
years later in West Oakland.

102 Islands
Sharing the story of his journey, Erian McPherson in his third novel, “a man who “looks like no other”—with creating a depiction of undead Pan-African spent in France, when sexual harassment followed him from his brother.

110 We Eat Cold Nets and Think Distance: Thoughts: Poetry
by Danielle Dugan Georges

111 Straddling Shifting Spheres Khalil Rathi, Joseph’s cousin with David Charity, author of Source, about the relationship between his scholarship and fiction.
The two also discuss Charity’s role in defining a Black Canadian literary vision.

128 Excerpt from Brother - Fiction

136 Burial Ground - Poetry
by Mireille Bélot

137 Legacies of Fear Lebanon Joel and Kenny Kane explore how blacks are constrained by the American legal system is inherently problematic—their new presence in public space an indication of wrongdoing. The authors draw comparisons between the Rodney King beating and Trueman Munsin’s murder, and introduce the following essays.

113 Remembering SAi-GU
In this interview, Jo Yoon-Kium returns to the impact of the 1992 L.A. Riots, which provided a Korean American perspective on the L.A. Riots. The filter for past and present Eckhart Ray is interviewed by Pete Terrace. The author about her
african-american perspective on the L.A. Riots. This piece goes on to discuss the motivations
behind her decision to return to the subject
years later in West Oakland.

155 The Luminescence of Guilt In this review we consider a number of images depicting black suffering. Patrick Williams scrutinizes how black Americans, from Rodney King to Trayvon Martin, have constantly been falsely construed as the perpetrators—rather than the victims—of violence against themselves.